That makes sense. Add 1-2 bullets for each. It's got to be concise language though. Take a cut at that.

Good feedback, do you think I should add some "context" related to those apps below the screenshots? Maybe a brief explanation of what they do?

Good rev. Its getting stronger. I've made a couple high level recommendations in here. Take another cut at it and then we'll do the detail/messaging polish.

Thanks for sharing, KP. Look forward to going through it.

Can you save this as a PPT and send over so that I can do some edits to send you?

Hello Ime,

As a follow up to your feedback and the call with the DevOps folks, I went ahead and updated the slides. Attached.

There are a few things we need to talk about, that I did not realize, that you may be aware of.

Should we use our 1to1 on Monday to go through those? Do please (provided you have time), send me any further thoughts you may have on those in the meantime.

Once you are happy I think we will need to share those with the following folks:

1/ Allison when she is back from Jury duty as we need to review potential changes on the policies

2/ Chris and Justin to address open questions

3/ Sam, Vernal and Doug for final sign off

Thanks a lot,

kp

Hello Ime,

I spent the best part of today thinking about the process as well as the requirements but the attached is still an early draft.

Still, I wanted to get your initial thoughts as I was planning to use those slides when I talk to DevOps and Allison tomorrow morning (at 11am if you want to join) about this.

Key points:

- 1/ Find out what other apps like Refresh are out there that we don't want to share data with and figure out if they spend on NEKO
 - * Communicate in one-go to all apps that don't spend that those permission will be revoked
 - * Communicate to the rest that they need to spend on NEKO at least $ 250K a year to maintain access to the data
- 2/ Review future submissions and reject/approve as per the requirements above
- 3/ Update our policies if need be
- 4/ Comms / PR plan if # of apps affected is significant

Just fyi, we will be at an EMEA offsite tomorrow – but will be online late in the afternoon.

Thanks a lot,

kp

Oh, just seeing this but sent a separate response.

I'm ok with the outcome but let's just figure out how to do things elegantly. I don't think he denied option A. I think we should adjust that approach to being a bit more aggressive with our data restrictions, to protect our strategic goals.

Great job.

While I can't say mission accomplished (given Sam did not go for option A), I think overall it was a good half way solution. Would you agree?

As for next steps, I will put a few thoughts together on:

- 1/ How to make this elegantly
- 2/ The specific requirements for our review team and SPDs to counter offer to developers

Thanks for setting this one up,
